

MELANIE HOEFNAGEL

I am Melanie Hoefnagel, a student in the class of 2026 Dual BA program between Sciences Po and Columbia University. I am studying political science, economics, and sustainable development.

Since I was a child, I've been deeply passionate about the ocean and its marine life. I would devour books about dolphins and whales, learning fascinating facts about these incredible creatures. This passion led me to join my high school's Green Club, where I worked for three years to make our school and city more sustainable. Now, as a member of Sciences Po Environnement, I organize conferences and take on projects for a greener future.

Working with TAF- The Animal Fund allows me to focus on preserving the ocean and educating others about the beauty and importance of marine life.
